READING PASSAGE 2 – Questions 41–45

Greenfield is testing a new way to travel around its centre. Small electric buses connect neighbourhoods with schools, libraries and clinics. Passengers can check the arrival time on a free app, but printed timetables remain at every stop for people without smartphones. The town council hopes the project will reduce traffic and pollution. Some older residents were worried about using the app, so volunteers have offered short training sessions. The council will collect feedback for three months before deciding whether to expand the service.

41. What is the main purpose of Greenfield’s project?

A. To promote a new sport.
B. To replace all libraries.
C. To improve local transport and reduce pollution.
D. To sell more smartphones.

42. How can a passenger without a smartphone check bus times?

A. By buying a ticket online.
B. By using printed timetables at stops.
C. By visiting a clinic.
D. By asking to borrow the driver’s phone.

43. Why did volunteers offer training sessions?

A. To answer concerns about using the app.
B. To teach children to drive.
C. To collect fares.
D. To build more buses.

44. How long will the council collect feedback?

A. One year B. One day C. Three months D. Two weeks
